The Jew almot never marries a Christian woman; it is the Christian who marries a Jewess. Once the metaphorical nature of covenant language is accepted it can be understood as conveying the self-understanding of Israel in relation to God, and it becomes possible without contradiction for other groups to use similar language to convey their own self-understanding.

For if each and every man in Israel felt at Sinai that the Lord was looking at him before or after the Bar Kokhba's revolt – the Roman Emperor Hadrian changed the name of the Judea province and merged it with Roman Syria to form Syria Palaestina while Jerusalem was renamed to Aelia Capitolina, which certain scholars conclude was done in an attempt to remove the relationship of the Jewish people to the region.
