Printable version. Stephen Orr lives in Adelaide. Basing her novel on historical facts, Sarah Schmidt wrote See What I Have Done about the possible perpetrator and psychopathology of the seemingly well-to-do Borden family at the centre of this late 19th century New England murder. After 26 years, during which Mark was curator at the National Gallery of Australia, he delivered a sensational second novel, The Snow Kimono, an intriguing narrative puzzle praised for its complexity and cunning nuance.

The only addition I would have appreciated was some photographs. Introduced prize has led to publication of some favourite Wakefield titles.
